

JENNIFER LISA VEST (drvest@earthlink.net) is an Assistant Professor of philosophy at the University of Central Florida in Orlando, and has taught at the University of the West Indies in Jamaica and Barbados. Her research areas include African, Native American and feminist philosophy and she is currently working on a book of essays entitled “The New Dialogic” as well as a manuscript on Academic Native American philosophy. Prior to completing her Ph.D. in African and Native American philosophy, Dr. Vest did research on African religious retentions in the Caribbean as part of a master’s thesis at Howard University.

CARLOS ROJAS OSORIO (rojasosorio2002@yahoo.com) es catedrático de Humanidades y Filosofía en la Universidad de Puerto Rico en Humacao. Ha publicado El problema de la causalidad en la epistemología de Mario Bunge; Hostos: apreciación filosófica; Filosofía moderna en el Caribe hispano; Pensamiento filosófico puertorriqueño; Foucault y el pensamiento contemporáneo; El asombro del pensar; Del ser al devenir; y con el Dr. Antonio Mansilla, Bibliografía de la filosofía en Puerto Rico. Rojas Osorio ha sido distinguido con la Cátedra de Honor Eugenio María de Hostos y con un reconocimiento especial de la Asociación Caribeña de Filosofía por el alcance y la calidad de su trabajo. Fue director del Departamento de Humanidades en la Universidad de Puerto Rico en Humacao; director del Instituto de Estudios Hostosianos y director de la revista Exégesis.

ENRIQUE D. DUSSEL (dussamb@servidor.unam.mx) teaches philosophy at the Universidad Autónoma Metropolitana, Iztapalapa, and the Universidad Autónoma de México in Mexico City. He is one of the founders of the philosophy of liberation in Argentina. In exile in México for more than thirty years he has published an impressive amount of articles and books such as Philosophy of Liberation (trans. 1985), The Invention of the Americas: Eclipse of the “Other” and the Myth of Modernity (trans. 1995), and The Underside of Modernity: Apel, Ricoeur, Rorty, Taylor, and the Philosophy of Liberation (trans. 1996). He has also published a three volumes commentary to the four drafts of Marx's Capital (1985-1990), and an encyclopedic work on ethical philosophy entitled, Ética de la liberación en la edad de la globalización y la exclusión (1998), among many other books. He is currently working on a three volumes work on political philosophy from a liberation philosophy perspective.

BRINDA J. MEHTA (mehta@mills.edu) is Professor of French and Francophone Studies at Mills Collage in Oakland, California where she teaches classes on postcolonial African and Caribbean literatures, Francophone cultures, feminist theory and cultural studies theory. She is the author of three books, Corps infirme, corps infame: la femme dans le roman balzacien; Diasporic (Dis)Locations: Indo-Caribbean Women Writers Negotiate the Kala Pani; Rituals of Memory in Contemporary Arab Women's Writing (forthcoming 2007); a co-edited volume of the C.L.R. James Journal on Indo-Caribbean/Afro-Caribbean Intellectual Thought; and numerous articles on postcolonial literature that have appeared in journals such as South Atlantic Quarterly, Callaloo, Meridians, The French Review, Journal of Caribbean Literature, among others. She is currently completing her fourth book, Framing Diaspora in Francophone Caribbean Women's Writing: Dougla Textuality, the Violence of Memory and Expanded Creolizations.

NELSON MALDONADO-TORRES (nmt@berkeley.edu), Ph.D. Brown University, is Assistant Professor of Comparative Ethnic Studies in the Department of Ethnic Studies at the University of California, Berkeley and former Postdoctoral Fellow in the Center for Global Studies and the Humanities at Duke University. He works on theories and philosophies that address problems and questions related to the intersection of knowledge, ethics and politics on the one hand, and race, gender, nation, and empire on the other, particularly in connection with critical theory, phenomenology, postcolonial studies, and modern religious thought. He has published several articles and is working on two book-length projects: Against War: Views from the Underside of Modernity (under contract with Duke University Press), and Fanonian Meditations. He is also the guest editor of this issue of Caribbean Studies on Caribbean philosophy, as well as the coordinator of a web dossier entitled Post-Continental Philosophy, forthcoming in the web journal Worlds and Knowledges Otherwise. In 2005, he co-edited with Ramón Grosfoguel and José David Saldívar the book Latin@s in the World System: Decolonization Struggles in the 21st U.S. Empire (Paradigm Press).

CLEVIS R. HEADLEY (headley@fau.edu) is currently an Associate Professor of philosophy and the Director of Ethnic Studies at Florida Atlantic University. He also serves as the Vice President of the Caribbean Philosophical Association. In addition to working in the areas of political philosophy and the philosophy of language, Professor Headley continues to work on various themes and issues within Africana philosophy and, more specifically, Afro-Caribbean thought.

NEIL ROBERTS (neil_roberts@hotmail.com) is a Ph.D. Candidate in Political Science at the University of Chicago, and he is presently Visiting faculty in the Center for Africana Studies and Department of Political Science at Johns Hopkins University. A member of the Caribbean Philosophical Association Board of Directors, Roberts is the recipient of fellowships from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and the Social Science Research Council. Among his published and forthcoming works include articles and book chapters in Clamor magazine, The C.L.R. James Journal, Daily Observer

(Jamaica), The Journal of Haitian Studies, Philosophia Africana, Sartre Studies International, and a critical reader on the thought of Sylvia Winter.

SIBYLLE FISCHER (sibylle.fischer@nyu.edu), Ph.D. Columbia University, is Associate Professor of Spanish & Portuguese and Comparative Literature at New York University. Before NYU, she taught in the Literature Program and the Department of Romance Studies at Duke. Her Modernity Disavowed: Haiti and the Cultures of Slavery in the Age of Revolution (Duke University Press, 2004) has received the Frantz Fanon Award (Caribbean Philosophical Association), the Singer Kovacs Award (Modern Language Association), and the Bryce Wood Award (Latin American Studies Association). She is also the editor of a new translation of Cirilo Villaverde's Cecilia Valdés (Oxford University Press, 2005). She is currently working on a new book tentatively entitled "The Political Subject", which studies the formation of collective identities and the articulations of political agency in the Caribbean.

MARINA PAOLA BANCHETTI-ROBINO (banchett@fau.edu) is Associate Professor and Chair of the Philosophy Department of Florida Atlantic University. Her areas of research are philosophy of science, philosophy of language, philosophy of mind, and phenomenology. She has published in Synthese, Husserl Studies, Idealistic Studies, Philosophy East & West, and The Review of Metaphysics. She co-edited Philosophies of the Environment and Technology (Stamford, Conn.: JAI Press, 1999) and is currently co-editing with Clevis Headley, Shifting the Geography of Reason: Gender, Science, and Religion, forthcoming with Cambridge Scholars Press.

ALEJANDRO DE OTO (ajedeoto@infovia.com.ar) enseña historia de la historiografía e historia contemporánea, con énfasis en los procesos teóricos y políticos de la poscolonialidad, en la Universidad Nacional de la Patagonia S.J.B., Argentina. Obtuvo su doctorado en el Centro de Estudios de Asia y África de El Colegio de México, ha sido Research Fellow en Brown University y participado del African Series Seminar de University of Cape Town como conferencista, entre otras actividades. Ha publicado numerosos artículos de crítica poscolonial, literatura de viaje y ensayos culturales. Es autor de tres libros, El viaje de la escritura. Richard Francis Burton y el este de África, Representaciones inestables y Frantz Fanon: Política y poética del sujeto poscolonial.

CECILIO COLÓN GUZMÁN (ceciarte@care2.com) nació en Barranquitas, Puerto Rico. Obtuvo su Bachillerato en Bellas Artes de la Universidad de Puerto Rico, Recinto de Río Piedras. A partir de 1978 ha expuesto su obra, tanto individual como colectivamente, en museos, galerías y salas de exposición en Puerto Rico y el exterior. Sus pinturas y dibujos forman parte de colecciones privadas y de instituciones tales como el Museo de Historia, Antropología y Arte de la Universidad de Puerto Rico, el Museo de Arte Contemporáneo de Puerto Rico y el Ateneo Puertorriqueño.